Coiled tubing, senior, supervisor supervising Coiled tubing, nitrogen stimulation, onshore offshore jobs In this role I handled a wide span of operational and supervisory duties across land rigs, rigless sites and offshore units. I carried out coiled tubing work such as cleanouts, well activation, acid stimulation, nitrogen lifting, milling, fishing and cementing tasks, including assignments in high-pressure and high-H2S conditions. I prepared equipment for each job, confirmed readiness through inspections and checklists, and supported commissioning when new units arrived at the base. I kept a steady focus on planning, reporting, and record keeping, completing pre-job and post-job documentation and submitting job tickets on time. I supervised crews during rig up, rig down and live operations, offering guidance, evaluating performance and helping new staff develop their skills. I worked closely with coordinators, clients and management to plan daily activities, allocate resources and maintain schedules. I ensured compliance with company standards, local regulations and HSE requirements, promoting safe habits and resolving issues as they appeared in the field. I also performed engineering calculations, reviewed well schematics and monitored the technical progress of complex jobs. Troubleshooting of equipment and processes formed a routine part of my duties, especially during demanding operations in remote desert environments. I kept inventory updated, organized demobilization for each site, and prepared units for the next assignment. Through consistent communication and steady operational oversight, I helped maintain service quality and client satisfaction across all locations.
